Vigorous development zone

The state-level economic and technological development zones are key economic zones that Chinese government has been supporting and paying special attention to. All these development zones are directly approved directly by State Council. The Chinese government has supported their development greatly in land use, tax, and finance and so on. Besides, the government also provides special regulations on the system, power and legal system for these development zones, and priority will be given to the approval and construction of some key projects.

Since Chinese government started to build economic and technological zones in some developed cities like Dalian, Tianjin, Shanghai and Guangzhou in 1984, the state-level economic and technological zones have now expanded to China's inland areas from the coastal areas. They are now widely distributed in China's major industrial cities and they have become the economic areas with most distinctive Chinese characteristics. The typical state-level development zones in China now include Suzhou Industrial Zone, Shanghai Pudong New Area, China Economy and Technology Development Zone, Fujian Taiwanese Investment Zone and Hainan Yangpu Development Zone and so on.

The state-level economic and technological development zones are featured by most intensive investment introduction from both at home and abroad, the fastest economic growth rate, most active market, the best investment condition, the newest operation systems and the largest economic benefit in China and so on.

Besides, the state-level economic and technological development zones also enjoy the following advantages:

- ✧ Attracting most intensive foreign investment;
- ✧ Having the most rapidly developing economy
- ✧ Capital intensive and technology intensive enterprises are the dominating enterprises, and hi-tech industries accounting for a considerable proportion
- ✧ Having advantage in location.
- ✧ Possessing great development potential and regional development advantage

- ✧ Equipped with advanced infrastructure and complete supporting systems
- ✧ Highly open and compliant with international rules
- ✧ Able to offer preferential investment policies and sound law and regulation environment
- ✧ With good development system
